Buyer Beware!

Each year, millions of dollars of water damage is done to homes from faulty water supply lines. Many of these lines were bought through eBay or salvage-type sources to save a few dollars.

Unfortunately, some of these products had been removed from mainstream providers for known defects that resulted in excessive failures, or had set in storage for years. Additionally, there typically is no warranty, no instructions, or no permanent marks to identify the manufacturer in the event of a failure.

DPI highly recommends purchasing supply lines from known, reputable suppliers to establish the quality of the line and to ensure its years of expected service life.
